

Georgia Peach Fuzz Buzz

All the news that fits the page! 2004 Later-than-Ever Edition

Lianne, a Breast Pro?

After owning a pair for thirty years, Lianne recently decided to take her relationship with breasts to another level. Rejected by Hooters for the final time, she started a new job in November as the clinical nurse at the Piedmont Hospital Breast Health Center. Lianne's primary responsibility is to educate patients, but she also gets involved in counseling and procedures at the clinic. Her husband observed "Lianne has always worked hard to stay abreast of the latest developments in nursing, but she's racked up quit a coop by escaping the boobs she's recently worked for to land this job." VJ allegedly applied for a position at the clinic too, but we are told his services are not required at this time.

ACHTUNG PANZER!

After successfully avoiding an overseas assignment since he left Germany in 1990, VJ will return to the "Vaterland" in June 05 for a two year assignment commanding 1st Battalion, 37th Armored Regiment, 1st Armored Division currently stationed in Friedberg outside Frankfurt am Main. Since this tank battalion will likely deploy to Iraq and may permanently relocate to the States during those two years, the Tedesco family made the difficult decision to have Lianne and Rachel remain in Peachtree City instead of moving to Germany. The big mystery is how VJ managed to get selected for this career-boosting job. Indeed, some commentators have suggested that his somewhat unconventional military career path should have precluded this opportunity. VJ attributes his selection to a benevolent God, errors in the files of better qualified officers, and an obscure provision of Army regulations that require at least one tank battalion be commanded by a short, over-educated Italian-American officer. Asked for his thoughts on VJ's selection, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld quipped that "you go to war with the Army you have, not necessarily the Army you want."

What Not to Wear?

On the heels of her acquisition by Limited Too in 2003, Rachel has launched a fashion consultant service serving the Tedesco household and the greater Peachtree City area. The start-up's core mission is to serve the middle school girl market, but where time allows Rachel and her partners provide pro bono services to parents in need. Lianne gets daily help with her difficult fashion decisions, but Rachel's biggest project to date is updating her father's wardrobe. "His closet is so 'stuck in the 80s,'" she observed. "We really need to move him beyond plaids and blues and into a more modern 70s retro look," Rachel added.

A Great Injustice Continues!

Sad to say, but the Tedesco's are apparently the ONLY people living in Peachtree City who don't own a golf cart for recreational outings and errands. During VJ's frequent travels, Lianne and Rachel have been know to go door to door begging to borrow the neighbor's carts so they can go to Kroger and buy food!

In Other News

- Where's the Beach Pt III. VJ deployed again briefly to Kuwait in September to once again slave away as an oarsman in the bowels of the Third Army/ARCENT planning staff.
- Thanks to work trips, VJ attained Silver Medallion level in the Delta Frequent Flyer Program. Whoohoo!
- Go Steelers!

Boo Boo Sighted in Fallujah

In another sign of how our enemies are cooperating in the global war on terrorism, wanted terrorist Osama bin Boo Boo was sighted in Fallujah during the recent operations by Marine and Army troops. Commanders in the area noted the increasing sophistication of the insurgents' attacks in the months leading up to the attack and suspect that Boo Boo was training local operatives in her advanced techniques. Regrettably, Boo Boo is believed to have escaped the cordon surrounding the city and may have returned to the Atlanta Metro area to continue operations against US military personnel in the Tedesco household.

Happy holidays to all and may the new year bring peace, happiness and togetherness to you and your loved ones,

The Tedescos